

Historic Holiday Let Joins cottages.com

The chance to holiday in one of Cornwall's best period properties is being offered to holidaymakers, as cottages.com celebrates the latest addition to its portfolio of luxury holiday lets – Grade-II listed The Old Vicarage in Manaccan.

Dating back to the 16th Century, the property, formerly a vicarage, once hosted maritime hero Captain William Bligh who in 1803 was wrongly arrested by Manaccan constables and brought to the Vicarage for inspection by the residing Vicar. Held in the outhouse of the property (now known as 'Bligh's Prison'), the Captain concealed his identity until he spoke with the Vicar, who declared him a gentleman and shared supper and wine with him until the early hours of the following morning in the dining room of The Old Vicarage.

Alongside the fascinating heritage of the village house, an impeccably furnished and endearing interior awaits those that book a break at this beautiful property. Lovingly restored to retain the Georgian period charm and detail, the property now comes complete with a tasteful décor and added details such as under-floor heating to ensure that all guests' experience of holidaying here is filled with maximum levels of comfort.

The restored chapel still plays an important part of the property and is accessible via a short, curving covered passageway, offering an impressive space for guests to while away the hours around a full-sized pool table. If that wasn't enough, the majority of the southern side of the property is taken by an elegant drawing room, which is complemented by a striking fireplace and two sets of French doors, allowing the all-encompassing views of the far-reaching countryside to seep into the property.

The historic village of Manaccan, just a mile from the sea, is a popular holiday destination in itself. With quaint streets and a welcoming community (that recently crowd-funded to keep its much-loved pub open for business), it's the ideal location to get away from it all and gather for celebrations or a reunion weekend in style.

Linda West, Business Development Manager in Cornwall said: "The Old Vicarage is a wonderful holiday property that we're sure will act as a marvellous setting during a getaway for larger parties. Its intriguing history, and enviable location at the centre of Manaccan, part of the Lizard Peninsula, makes its offering even more exciting and we're looking forward to helping holidaymakers from around the country enjoy many getaways here."

Mr. and Mrs. Waldron added: "With the level of experience in letting holiday properties like The Old Vicarage, cottages.com was the obvious choice for us to help share our property with holidaymakers from around the UK and abroad. Its local team in Cornwall have been second to none and we can't wait to welcome bookings throughout 2018 and beyond."

The Old Vicarage (property reference: UKC2557) is now available through cottages.com and sleeps up to 11 in five bedrooms, making it the perfect place for large families and groups of friends to gather for celebrations or enjoy a reunion in style.
