

cottages.com Cancels Credit Card Charges

The UK's leading self-catering provider, cottages.com has today announced it is dropping credit card charges on all cottage bookings.

The company, which offers nearly 20,000 properties across the UK, Ireland, France and Italy is the first cottage company to stop charging customers for their method of payment.

Nick Rudge, cottages.com Managing Director commented: "As we start a new year, we wanted to ensure our customers are always put first so have decided to drop credit card charges."

James Daley, Managing Director at Fairer Finance added: "We're delighted that cottages.com has become the latest company to respond to our campaign. Customers hate being charged to pay by credit card, and we're increasingly hearing of people avoiding businesses that refuse to axe these fees. The pressure is now on other businesses in the travel industry to follow the example set by cottages.com and others."
